The road to compliance ...

Although most human resource managers realize the need for greater accountability in the compliance reporting practices, many have been slow to respond to the challenges with the technology required to put their companies at best advantage.

PMG.net has designed PMG iComply to address the need for technology in human resources that provides identification, creation, reporting and audit capabilities quickly and easily. Bringing internal controls back inside the organization is essential to reduce costs and gain a near real-time snapshot of employee and company compliance levels.

By providing templates and process automation; identifying, developing and creating a new policy can be completed in a single location. Each user has a unique login that provides traceability during this process, and through differentiation of roles, can limit access to functionality and capability.

Whatever results you're looking for—lowering costs, enabling employees, improving operations, reducing risk or gaining market share—with PMG, you can achieve them ...

Consistency is key...

Compliance is defined as acting according to certain accepted standards. Many of these standards and policies are developed by regulatory agencies that establish boundaries for a variety of topics, such as discrimination, safety and financial reporting. The creation of a policy in an organization needs consistency in the language and intended definition established by a regulatory agency and documented with version controls for traceability.

Having the right technology in place gives executives a dashboard to evaluate compliance accuracy and acceptance. How does this provide consistency? By enabling executives and management with a tool that gives them detailed reporting on regulatory policies in an organization.

The increasing cost of compliance to organizations has hastened the pace at which companies of all sizes are embracing enterprise policy management technology to gain the control and visibility that today's regulatory environment demands. Companies that take advantage of this technology to improve policy distribution and acceptance are rewarded by the reduction of costs associated with litigation, while those that fail to step up to the challenge face potentially serious and costly repercussions.

With a single, integrated data model providing the control and flexibility to meet all reporting and analysis needs, PMG iComply generates compliance scores and recommendations through a series of dashboards, scorecards and reports that prioritize compliance, vulnerability and risk-remediation efforts.
